I do not sell resources.

- The selling of resources from teachers to teachers is, in my opinion, completely immoral.
- Nothing is entirely original, and I do not pretend that any of my resources are. The resources I create are a product of everything I have picked up so far in my teaching career, so I would feel extremely uncomfortable selling them. I spend a lot of time creating resources, but this still does not mean I should be selling them.
- I take pride in giving away my resources for free. Sharing resources is one way of extending my influence as a teacher beyond the four walls of my own classroom. It is a wonderful feeling knowing that my resources are helping a teacher teach and learners learn on the other side of the country or even the world!
- Be kind, for goodness sake! We are all in this together, and we should all be supporting one another in our common goal of educating.
